The Given Self

The given self is behind every fight for the right of each of us to be who we are and is the way to personal and spiritual liberation. The Given Self is about taking back what we've lost: our selves, our hearts, our humanity.

A Course of Love

Latin Synonyms, with Their Different Significations

Tocqueville, Democracy, and Religion addresses Alexis de Tocqueville's views on the role of religion in democratic societies. Tocqueville, the author of Democracy in America (quoted in every American president's inaugural address for the past 40 years) was particularly interested in how religion could help democratic societies overcome materialism and selfishness and maintain their freedom. Tocqueville's views on the separation of church and state and on the spiritual checks and balances religion provides to democracies will interest political theorists, while Alan S. Kahan's analysis of the intellectual origins of Tocqueville's thought and its roots in nineteenth-century French politics will attract the interest of historians. Kahan provides the first comprehensive account of Tocqueville's analysis of religion, and shows how his insights can offer us new perspectives on one of the most pressing issues of our time.

Essays on Style, Rhetoric, and Language

"You seek a description of a new way, a new time, as if it is a future that is already written. It is a future waiting to be birthed. An imminent birth that you are feeling with all your mothering instincts and concern for the new babe, the jewel of humanity and Heaven." Thus begins Mirari: The Way of the

Marys. In Mirari, Mari Perron, who received A Course of Love twenty years ago, enters an intimate exchange with Mary of Nazareth. Their dialogue gives life to "the way of Mary," briefly introduced in her earlier work. In this new book, Perron departs from the classic style of "the course" and surprises us with her own vulnerability. In words spoken intimately between Mary of Nazareth and Mari Perron, our hearts are called to embrace our knowing in all its fullness. Uniting the feminine and masculine within, wholeness of being joins wholeheartedness, releasing all the feelings of the sacred heart. We can now welcome our grief over the way that is passing. Grief is "alive with soul and depth and longing." It empowers us to leave the old behind. As we cease to think of ourselves as learning beings, new ways of knowing arise. We become creators of The New. Here, the two women follow A Course of Love's call for "creation of the new" with the labor of the birth and the "Mother laws of care and nurture-given to all." Together, they demonstrate the radical energy that arises from within each one's felt knowing. From our union in relationship, we know that the time is here to give birth to a new age. Mary of Nazareth was not unfamiliar with this call or the grief that accompanied it. Her life, as well as the life of Jesus, announced an unwelcome breach in the old order. So too is it with A Course of Love and the new Way of the Marys. Mari Perron shares her personal experience of receiving A Course of Love and knowing this was not more "learned wisdom." She mourned that the call to "unlearning," key to a new way of knowing, went unheard. Mary and Mari assure us that it is from a feminine way of knowing-deeper than thought, and impossible to learn-that The New will arise. It is a courageous act to not be willing to repeat the past. But letting it go is part of healing our own and the collective feminine wound. This healing opens the way, not only to unifying the feminine and masculine, but for the birth of an age that will end all such divisions. The two women invite us to rise up and join in the blossoming of a New Advent. We claim our time of Mirari: the wonder of coming to know the unknown that is our inheritance. In this essential feminine way, we welcome receptive revelation that does not take us away from life or the personal milieu in which it occurs. Instead, it joins them fully. Mari Perron knows that it is time for the feminine voice of God and of women to be recognized as a power that has always been-but been denied. Increasingly, her writings champion the ways, often discounted, in which women come to know. Mirari: The Way of the Marys presents a vision that will mid-wife the birth of The New. We begin with a word both new and ancient. We begin with a return to the way of the Word made flesh. This will be the time of wonder-or Mirari. From Mirari: The Way of the Marys Here, in our time of bringing the miracle to mystery . . . we offer Mirari as the way of the divine feminine . . . From Mirari: The Way of the Marys This is not the masculine energy of going out to conquer the world. This is the birth of the new world. From Mirari: The Way of the Marys The suffering of labor is passed with the birth. The world, and each of its occupants, has been in labor to complete its own birth. From Mirari: The

Beyond Jesus

Messages from A Choir of Angels-Book 2 Let yourself be carried on the wings of love. Surrendering to love is both necessary and beautiful. To let yourself be loved means to trust without reservation that love will do with you what you most long for. Your soul has already moved towards union with the heart of God. Now it recognizes that it was created to be loved and for nothing else. Therefore let love fill you fully and do what it knows how to do. Enjoy being carried on the shoulders of love. Invisible realms of Angels became visible to Sebastián Blaksley in an extraordinary series of 144 visitations overseen by Archangels Raphael and Gabriel. They asked him to take down their messages, including messages from Jesus and Mother Mary. Choose Only Love is the result. Hearing this truth, like hearing a song once loved but forgotten, rekindles a relationship with your true self that is direct, personal, and magnificent. Choose Only Love ushers in a conscious return to your First Love.

Pikin Slee

The Mirage of America in Contemporary Italian Literature and Film explores the use of images associated with the United States in Italian novels and films released between the 1980s and the 2000s. In this study, Barbara Alfano looks at the ways in which the individuals portrayed in these works — and the intellectuals who created them — confront the cultural construct of the American myth. As Alfano demonstrates, this myth is an integral part of Italians' discourse to define themselves culturally — in essence, Italian intellectuals talk about America often for the purpose of talking about Italy. The book draws attention to the importance of Italian literature and film as explorations of an individual's ethics, and to how these productions allow for functioning across cultures. It thus differentiates itself from other studies on the subject that aim at establishing the relevance and influence of American culture on Italian twentieth-century artistic representations.

Tocqueville, Democracy, and Religion

The Dublin review

In the crucible of grief following a friend's death, Presbyterian pastor Patricia Pearce sensed a dimension of existence beneath her ordinary perception—and became resolved to discover it. She soon found herself in a vortex of revelatory dreams, synchronicities, energy openings, and insights that shattered her worldview, exposed a unified Reality of Love, and unveiled the illusory nature of the ego and the world it has created. Faced with these discoveries, she struggled to remain in a religion that, she now realized, has been shaped by the very ego consciousness Jesus transcended and urged others to abandon. Enlightening, revelatory, and bold, Beyond Jesus reveals how our political and religious institutions are an outward manifestation of the inner beliefs we hold about who we are, and that beneath the layers of dogma about Jesus lies a key to our spiritual evolution and the astonishing possibility it holds for the future.

Mary's Way of the Cross

In a powerful challenge to conventional wisdom, Philip Hamburger argues that the separation of church and state has no historical foundation in the First Amendment. The detailed evidence assembled here shows that eighteenth-century Americans almost never invoked this principle. Although Thomas Jefferson and others retrospectively claimed that the First Amendment separated church and state, separation became part of American constitutional law only much later. Hamburger shows that separation became a constitutional freedom largely through fear and prejudice. Jefferson supported separation out of hostility to the Federalist clergy of New England. Nativist Protestants (ranging from nineteenth-century Know Nothings to twentieth-century members of the K.K.K.) adopted the principle of separation to restrict the role of Catholics in public life. Gradually, these Protestants were joined by theologically liberal, anti-Christian secularists, who hoped that separation would limit Christianity and all other distinct religions. Eventually, a wide range of men and women called for separation. Almost all of these Americans feared ecclesiastical authority, particularly that of the Catholic Church, and, in response to their fears, they increasingly perceived religious liberty to require a separation of church from state. American religious liberty was thus redefined and even transformed. In the process, the First Amendment was often used as an instrument of intolerance and discrimination.

A second letter to father Ryder [In reply to his Letter to William George Ward, on his theory of infallible instruction].

"Creation of the New" is a post-apocalyptic vision for our times. Imagery and metaphor best describe "Creation of the New." Its words reflect the powerful effects brought forth by its author Mari Perron. Her authentic mystical voice is reminiscent of Mechtild of Magdeburg; at once feminine and supremely intelligent. "Creation" introduces a post-apocalyptic era. Perron is not hesitant to use apocalyptic language, or to acknowledge the apocalyptic nature of the times in which we live, yet her emphasis is upon the prophetic announcement of the birth of the new "Babe," the "jewel of humanity" hidden in the obvious. Creation's message is of imminent importance in these turbulent and painful times. As we each experience the apocalypse with ourselves - as the death of the old and birth of the new - the same crisis of death and rebirth is occurring in the world. It is in progress. Our awareness and embrace of this transformational time is crucial to keeping "the burning Cause of hope alive within the heart when no cause is left for hope."

The Dublin Review

This is a practical, how-to book to learn to let go of limitations and come into the True Self of your being--the Christ Self. There are 100 Conversations Master LaValley had throughout the years with various Spiritual Seekers, often with startling information about what it means to be a Christ, and how to come into that level of energy. Each Conversation has Practices--one at the Beginner's Level and one at the Advanced Energy Being's Level. Doing the Practices will take you into energy levels where Oneness is clear, obvious and felt. The book has many ties to A Course In Miracles, Eastern teachings and the practices of non-duality. It is not a "study" book, however, and makes it very clear that this is about doing the Practices to learn to live in and as the Christ Consciousness on a permanent basis. Master LaValley was never a student of religion or metaphysics until he had a Revelation of Jesus Christ. He realized that, with the help of the Christ, he could release the limitations of being human and become the Divine Self that he was in truth. Jesus told him he would show him all that He learned and all that He did to become the Christ Himself, and then to become the Oneness of God. The Conversations lay out these ideas and concepts, as well as many examples of what happens when the personal consciousness expands and lets go of the limitations it has imposed upon its Self. There is a Bibliography of Suggested Reading and a Clarification of Terms, as well as an email address for folks looking to connect with others who are reading and doing the Practices from How To Become A Christ.
