Eurasian epidemics. It has been suggested that smallpox was a major component of the Plague of Athens that occurred in 430 BCE, during the Peloponnesian Wars, and was described by Thucydides. Galen's description of the Antonine Plague, which swept through the Roman Empire in 165-180 CE, indicates that it was probably caused by smallpox. Returning soldiers brought the disease home with them

White politicians denounced any manifestation of it, African American leaders denied any interest in it. Social equality was the euphemism of choice for the ancient taboo of sex between black men and white women. Black leaders found it necessary to navigate the treacherous political eddies that swirled around this issue of social equality.
